The Work area To perform any type of editing, open a new image in Photoshop using the File menu and the New dialog box, shown in Figure 9-7. You can then open or create a new document; add or delete layers; zoom in and out; and move, cut, copy, and paste layers. You'll need to keep an eye on your selection; remember that you can select the entire canvas or only the area you want to work on. FIGURE 9-7 In this example, you can select only part of the image to work with. Editing a layer involves using its options. Click to select a layer and then use the Options bar at the bottom of the layer (refer to Figure 9-6) to adjust the various settings, including which area you want to work with, the color, and the layer properties, which include the Opacity setting. You can perform the same basic editing work using the Layer menu and the Layer Properties palette. By default, all layers are active when you start a new document (choose File ➤ New ➤ Other or click the layer icon in the Layers panel). If you want to work only with specific layers (such as the Background layer), simply click the layer and use the Layer Properties palette to make the necessary changes. ## Using the Tools The Photoshop work area includes tools for your image-editing needs. From left to right, the Tools palette (refer to Figure 9-6) displays the following four tools. To select one of the Tools, click it to display the list of tools in the menu. Click the large drop-down arrow to access the detailed list of commands (usually with check boxes to toggle each tool on or off).

Boris Johnson told the BBC that the UK would commit £40m to the Global Alliance to Ban Tobacco Smoking. The alliance represents more than 60 countries and aims to "double the world's collective ambition" to reduce smoking rates. The data so far, he added, "suggested that tobacco [smoking] is rising in low and middle income countries". Mr Johnson says the UK will be working with the alliance and UN agencies to "win the war on smoking". Tobacco smoking is the single greatest preventable cause of death and the UK is leading the world by reducing the number of smokers, he said. According to the World Health Organization, tobacco use is the most prevalent risk factor for premature death in the UK. One in five British smokers will die prematurely from their habit. Smoking rates in the UK are down 30% from the 1970s, but only 60% of adults in England have stopped smoking. In 2013, 1.3 million died as a result of smoking, and each year, more than 1,000 people in the UK die as a direct result of smoking. 'A global achievement' Asked about the UK's stance on climate change, Mr Johnson suggested his views may be on the "fringier" end of the Conservative party, but said he was committed to working with everyone. The alliance has for the first time set a date for a meeting to agree a global tobacco treaty in October 2015. The BBC understands that the UK will offer £40m to the fund over three years. It will also support other countries' efforts to cut smoking rates, including by sponsoring UN conferences and conferences on tobacco-related health issues. This is the first time that tobacco has been brought together into one of the global organisations to try to achieve a major global reduction in smoking rates, which has reduced in the UK over the last 30 years, according to the Department of Health and Social Care. The UK is also one of a number of countries that has set targets for reducing smoking rates. The Department of Health says that to meet its objective of reducing smoking rates by a quarter by 2025, it will spend £700m
